In this scheme we have enrolled BPL, LIG and Non Lig CWSN in MR/CP/MD/ASD 40 students. Adarsh Para Medical Welfare Association has known historically, being an agrarian, India is endowed with a large population living in rural area. Indian villages are traditionally known for their culture of community living. Persons with Disabilities are treated as equals and part of the community and they are eventually included. They are provided due care and rehabilitation services through institution of family. Indeed, many of mild and moderate ones used top get mingled and had the social acceptance in the mainstream. The institution of family used to be a major strength in the care of the persons with severe and profound disability.

The families of the persons with disabilities, particularly the parents and siblings do also have needs different from others, which cannot be segregated from the special needs of the children with disabilities, if our intention is to extend proper rehabilitation services. Some of the important family needs are information about of the child, management of the child, services available, vocational rehabilitation, marriage issue of the child, emotional needs, social acceptance, etc. In my opinion, the needs of the families having a child with disabilities have a bearing on the rehabilitation services of the persons with disabilities. The biggest need of a parent, which is yet to be answered particularly, is “What will happen to our child after us?” This is the ultimate challenge in the area of rehabilitation.
